MOST BELOVED OF LIVING AU-THORS IN ENGLAND

Hosts of Americans Entertaining and Resting in London and Motoring Over England-Paul Jones's Grandnicee in Want-Some Issues of Diplomacy.

Special Cable Despatches to THE SUN.

LONDON, July 14.-Mark Twain ended his memorable English visit and sailed for home yesterday. He started at 9:58 in the morning for Tilbury, twenty miles down the river, where he will board the Atlantic Transport Company's steamship Minnetonka for New York. There was a large gathering of friends upon the station platform to bid him farewell.

At this time it is fitting that a serious word should be said about his extraordinary month's visit to England. No foreigner has ever been treated as he has been by the English people. His welcome began as he walked down the gangplank when the stevedores on the dock broke into cheers. The highest and the greatest in the land have joined eagerly in all forms of tribute to this untitled friend of all mankind.

He says himself that the universal welcome by the masses at every opportunity has pleased him most. The wonder is that a man of 72, or indeed of any age, should go through the enormous programme of the last four weeks and live to tell the tale Mr. Clemens not only lived but thrived upon it, and he goes home to write such a chapter of his autobiography as no other. American was ever able to record.

If the truth must be told, Twain's popularity in England is of a warmer and more personal nature than even in his own country. He has won the hearts of Englishmen as no living writer has done, and they love to do him honor. The cheers at his departure were of a different note from those on his arrival, and for once his emotion silenced him as 'he waved Recording Mark Twain's departure the Sunday papers speak in affectionate terms of his personality.

"It is good news," says one, "that he has changed his mind and postponed his funeral. We are all the better for having entertained him and now may hope to see again the philosophic jester who will ever remain young in our hearts."

The Sunday Times makes the farewell its leading editorial, saying: "Of all the American men of letters, Twain may safely be said to have had the warmest appreciation in the British Isles. There has also been an episode in the life of Twain closely resembling one which won for Sir Walter Scott the admiration of his countrymen. Both writers became involved in the affairs of a publishing house and both spent a large portion of their lives in clearing off debts which they themselves had not contracted. Britishers appreciate and applaud such acts as these and the light which such an act throws on the sterling worth and deathless character underlying the topmost froth of thought in the humorist makes the entire nation grapple him to their hearts with hoops of steel."

DIPLOMATIC ETIQUETTE.

LONDON, July 13. - Some of the comments recently cabled to THE SUN about the social attitude of members of the American DiplomaticCorps abroad have come back to Europe and have attracted some attention. They have revived discussion of the well known anachronism that America's representatives in diplomacy are the richest and the poorest paid of any in the world. It is also true that they make a greater display than those of any other country. It is not surprising, perhaps, that they should outvie their colleagues in the enforcement of what they consider strict social rules and prece-

Any American who expected the same treatment at certain United States Embassies in Europe as he would get, for instance, at the State Department in Washington would run the risk of an unpleasant snub. If he was a Consul-General the matter might get talked about, but the wealthy American gentlemen who represent American democracy would scarcely mind that. They know that their posts are not sought for by any but those of independent means and probably of the same social tastes. And it all merely goes to show that the American diplomatic service will not become in any sense representative until the country makes it possible for men of brains but not of money to enter it. That time will not come until Congress makes provision for the extremely heavy expenses connected with the diplomatic service in any capacity in Europe.

Ambassador Reid will make the principal address at the dedication by the Bishop of Southwark of the John Harvard memorial chapel in St. Saviour's Cathedral, Southwark. A large number of Americans will be present. Most of the money for the chapel has been subscribed by old Harward men in the United States.

PAUL JONES'S GRANDNIECE.

Gen. Samuel C. Lawrence and his brother Daniel, with Charles T. Gallagher of Boston, have returned to London from Paris. They will sail for Boston next week. The trio first went to Brussels to attend the supreme council of the thirty-third degree Masons. Afterward they made a trip up the Rhine. On the Fourth of July they attended the American banquet in Paris. While investigating some Masonic matters concerning Paul Jones, who was a member of Exclusive Lodge of America, of which Ben Franklin was also a member being admitted not because he was a fighter but a poet, they accidentally discovered that the only living relative of Paul Jones was existing in a state of extreme poverty in Paris, working as a charwoman for five sous a day. This woman, Mrs. Gombault, is a granddaughter of Paul Jones's sister. She was born in Charleston, S. C., and is a highly educated woman, speaking and writing French, German and other languages. She attended a school in Gramercy Park, New York, with Mrs. Martin Brimmer, married a Frenchman and went to live in Paris, where in her old age she was reduced to poverty. Mr. Lawrence took the matter up and purchased a number of Jones's relics which she had, including the original document which Jones sent to the Congressional committee giving the details in his own handwriting of the fitting out of and the expenditures in regard to the Ranger at Portsmouth.

Mr Lawrence interested other Americans assisting the old lady and made such arrangements that she shall never again experience want. The relics are now on the way to America. Mr. Lawrence will be furious if his connection with the case becomes known. He prefers that his charity shall remain unpublished. It is suggested that when the General returns to the United States arrangements may be made whereby the Masons of America will take the matter up and furnish permanent relief for the old lady. She was overjoyed at the kindness of Gen. Lawrence to the cemetery on the Fourth of July, light to fresh southerly winds.

REGISTERING AT CONSULATES

A number of Americans in London, particularly the wealthy sort, who were at first inclined to ignore the new registration act, have now come to the conclusion that perhaps it would be wise for them to go to the consulates and inscribe their names. They have not come to this conclusion by virtue of patriotic sentiment, but wholly through material consideration.

After consulting their lawyers they learned that if their status as Americans was not clear England might for purposes of taxation regard them purely as British subjects and enforce her death duties on not only their English but their American holdings. Many of them think that as the registration costs nothing it will be a safe and cheap means of avoiding such a contingency, particularly as their holdings are in the United States

THEATRICAL NEWS.

William A. Brady during a flying trip to Paris last week secured for his wife, Grace George, the option on the Anglo-American rights to Réjane's autumn production of a comedy of the "Sans Gene" type. The cenes are laid in Paris and Germany during the Commune, and it is likely that Miss George will open for a week a London season with this play.

Mr. Brady has also obtained the rights to Hall Caine's "The Bondman, which will e a vehicle for Wilton Lackaye, who will play the part of Jason, opening his season in St. Louis. Brady has also bought an option on Sardou's next play, which will be done in Paris in December by M. Coquelin and afterward at the Drury Lane.

The drama "The Sins of Society" will also be taken to America by Brady, who has agreed to transport the entire production intact with a number of the original London cast, including Albert Chevalier, who will make his return to the legitimate stage after an absence of many years.

Grace George is giving an example of the strenuous life. It is probably the first time in the history of the stage that an attraction which closed in New York was taken on the ship the next day, played for a summer season in London, returned to New York and immediately reopened without loss of time. Miss George closed in New York on May 31. She sailed for London on June 1. She arrived in London on June 8. She will close her season here on July 26, will sail for New York on August 1 and will open the season at the Lyceum Theatre in New York on August 12. She will close in Chicago on April 15 and will open in London on May 1. The only vacation that Miss George allows herself for the three seasons is the time spent on the steamers between ports.

AMERICANS ENTERTAIN

There has been a considerable movement among Americans in London this week, a large number going to and coming from the Continent, but the prominent people, such as Mrs. Astor, Mrs. Belmont, Mrs. Drexel and Mrs. Gould, remained in town attending smart luncheons and dinners, the pageant at Cleremont and the Eton-Harrow matches. It has been a busy week socially, and the hotels are mostly crowded with English folk who came to town especially to see the Eton-Harrow contest. One of the largest luncheons of the season was given on Thursday by Frederick Townsend Martin at the Ritz. The tables were beautifully decorated. The guests were mostly prominent Americans who have entered the British peerage There were present Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin, Lord and Lady Craven, Earl Howe, H. W. Williams and Mrs. William Post. Mrs. John Jacob Astor has been giving number of luncheons. Yesterday she had a large party, including Lord and Lady Essex and Lord Lonsdale.

the Marquis and Marchioness of Dufferin,

Lady Arthur Paget, Lord de Morley, Mrs.

Mrs. William Moore returned to Paris to-day, but her short stay in London was for the many engagements she fulfilled. She gave a number of dinners and luncheons, the principal guests being the Duke of Marlborough, Prince Paul Demidoff and Lady Saville. When Mrs. Moore left the Ritz this morning she created sensation in the hall, where she called up all the servants in a row and showered her largesse generously.

The social event of the season undoubtedly was the dinner and cotillon given Lady Colebrooke (Mrs. George Keppel) at the Ritz. Americans were well represented and in the assemblage there were the Prime Minister of Great Britain, the Duke and Duchess of Westminster, Prince Francis of Teck, Lord and Lady de Grey. Arthur Balfour, the Russian and Austrian Ambassadors, Winston Churchill, Henry Chaplin, Lord and Lady Castlereagh, Mrs. J. J. Astor, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Drexel and Miss Drexel, Lady Cunard, Lady Alan Johnstone, Mrs. George Cornwallis-West, Lady Paget, Consuelo Duchess of Manchester and Lady Essex.

At the Ritz restaurant during the past fortnight there has been a gorgeous display of jewels and unconscious rivalry between Mrs. Perry Belmont and Mrs. John Drexel. Both ladies have been dining with large parties and their array of diamonds, pearls, turquoises and other precious stones has been something remarkable, the like not having been seen in a hotel restaurant in London in many years. Which lady is entitled to the palm for the beautiful display is a matter of hot dispute

In this connection it is noticeable that Mrs. John Jacob Astor rarely wears many jewels, confining herself to a few ornaments n her hair and a modest necklace. While the Astors, the Belmonts and the Drexels are constantly seen in the company of distinguished folk, it is much commented that Mr. and Mrs. George Gould furnish the best example of family loving Americans seen in MOTOR TOURS. Motoring as a means of seeing England ant the Continent is constantly increasing in popularity among Americans. Fully half of the guests at the leading hotels have brought their motors from America with them. Gen. and Mrs. A. E. Booth of Baltinore in their big car have just returned to the Carlton after a month's tour which tool in Scotland, Wales, Ireland and England.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Everett, with a large party, have left the Carlton for a week's notoring through the English lake district. Mr. and Mrs. William Church Osborne of Boston with their family of four sons and a daughter left Claridge's yesterday for an extensive motor tour. They will first go to The Hague, thence through Norway and Sweden and as far into the Arctic regions as possible. Afterward they will do Germany thoroughly.

There is scarcely a spot in any of these countries which the Booths did not visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Morton F. Plant are still at the Ritz. Commodore Plant, as was expected, denies the report that he has sold his yacht Ingomar to Germany. The Plants have been motoring a great deal lately making short day trips from London and returning to the Ritz at night Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Whitney of Detroit have just completed an interesting thousand mile tour of the English lake district. W. D. Thornton and daughter of New York have arrived at Claridge's after an interesting motor tour in Scotland. The Misses Peck of Chicago are also at Claridge's after a visit to Scotland.

GOINGS AND COMINGS. Henry Phipps has returned to Claridge's after spending a few days at Battle Abbey. Lord and Lady Bateman, who are spend-ing the suramer at Contrexeville, were obliged burriedly to come to London in order to attend the funeral of a sister of Lord Bateman

Judge and Mrs. Charles W. Murray, who have been doing the Shakespearian country and Oxford, are at Claridge's. Walter Winans, the all conquering exhibitor at the Olympia horse show, has just returned from Belgium, where he captured numerous blue ribbons with his American horses

George B. Post and family of New York, who have been at Aix-les-Bains, are at the Hotel Berkeley, where they will remain for several weeks

Col. and Mrs. Thompson, with Mrs. Oliver Roosevelt and Miss Roosevelt, arrived this week from Paris. The Colonel was ill in Paris and didn't arrive until the day following the arrival of his party. They went to Cleremont to attend the pageant as guests of Lord Charles Beresford on board the Admiral's flagship.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Stickney of St. Paul are at the Cecil, where they are making a considerable stay. Senator and Mrs. W. A. Clark and baby have found the attentions of newspaper men in London so persistent that they shortened their stay in the city and went to Mr. Clark's chateau near Paris. Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Prince of Minneapolis are at the Berkeley after having made a tour Lady Yarmouth intends sailing for Amer-

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Hickox of New ork, who live mostly in Paris, are now at Claridge's. Among other interesting Americans in London are Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Voornees and family of Philadelphia; Mrs. Edward Sturgess; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Lawson. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Holbrooke, Mr. and Mrs. Burrall Hoffman. Mr. and Mrs. Felix Vorneberg of Boston, all at the Carlton. Cyrus H. McCormick of Chicago is at the Cecil with his two sons, Millington and Drake, who are at Eton and have been having a glorious relaxation from school discipline this week owing to the Eton-

Harrow matches. Mr. Drake was unable to come from Paris, so he told his sons to take his rooms at the Ritz. Each night he wires Manager Ellis the exact menu the boys are to have for dinner, also what wine they may drink and how many glasses each. Each order is followed exactly, although the boys have registered a mild kick at papa's parsimony in regard to champagne.

SWINDLING MAID IN COURT. J. P. Morgan Testifies That He Did Not Give

Her Tips on Stock Market. Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN LONDON, July 13.-Josephine Leslie, the maidservant who is charged with swindling Miss Blount of Dublin and others out of large sums of money by pretending that J. Pierpont Morgan was giving her "tips" on the stock market, was before the police court again to-day. Mr. Morgan testified that he did not know the prisoner, had never had charge of her financial interests and had never invited her to dine at his son's house Mr. Morgan, when asked if he knew the prisoner, replied:

"Not as far as I can recollect. I don't think I have ever seen her before. Mr. Morgan said it was not true that he had advised her to invest $5,000 in a certain syndicate, promising her in return $125,000 He had not sent her any checks as her profits in the syndicate.

Mr. Morgan was informed that he would have to attend the sessions at the New Bailey, where the prisoner's trial will take place.

Miss Blount, in giving her evidence, said the prisoner told her she had been married before the American Consul in Geneva and that she had a father and sister living in Switzerland. She said she had paid out a great deal of money in settlement of her husband's debts and had had an unhappy married life. Therefore she had taken a situation as kitchen maid. She declared that she had an income of $50,000 a year and that her sister had the same. Her father and brother, she said, were wealthy men.

The prisoner was remanded. She was in the position of kennel maid, namely, in charge of pet dogs, in a wealthy London family when she made the acquaintance of Miss Blount and her other victims.

Her body, embalmed and dressed in silk brocades and adorned with lewels, diamond earrings, a pearl necklace and several rings set in brilliants and sapphires, was placed in the family vault in a Naples cemetery. Every week the family of the dead woman went to the cemetery where Vitozzi, who was one of the chaplains, said

One day the tomb was found open and the jewels had been stolen. The indignation of the chaplain was unbounded. While the members of the Baroness' family shed tears at the profanation the priest cried shame on the custodians of the place, who he said, were responsible for the outrage.

The police cooperated in the investigation and furnished troops which led to the arrest of several persons who were tried and acquitted. Members of the Baroness' family decided to present the priest with a sum of money as an expression of their gratitude for his services.

The jewels were never recovered, but the priest continued to say weekly masses for the repose of the soul of the deceased until his arrest last month. The carabinieri have positive proofs, they say, that the priest is the person who stole the jewels.

but has won a host of friends. He is full of his mission and regards it as for the benefit of humanity that all countries should join in finally regulating the immigration and emigration questions. The German authorities are helping him all they can. But this has not prevented the impression from getting abroad that the emigration from Europe to the United States. He told the correspondent of THE SUN to-day emphatically that such was not the case. Indeed, he holds himself that less emigration to the United States would be better for her.

The simplicity of the Senator's character was amusingly illustrated by his attempt while on the way from Vienna to Berlin to settle his score in the dining car with an Adams Express bill for $20. He was saved from embarrassment by a fellow traveller who generously paid the amount.

Former Congressman McCleary is expected here soon to negotiate with the postal department about a renewal of the greement for postal arrangements aboard he Hamburg-American and North German Lloyd mail steamers. The companies are and Col. J. P. and Mrs. Grant.

There has been much talk about a large donation from Andrew Carnegie for a public library in Berlin and of a gift to the Treptow Observatory. In the latter case the wish was father to the thought. Director Archenhold uttered the wish on the occasion of the unveiling of Mr. Carnegle's picture at the observatory some weeks ago. The at the observatory some weeks ago. The American Ambassador is reported as saying that Mr Carnegie on hearing the re-port merely remarked that if he donated anything to any other countries than America and Scotland he would soon spend all his money on the wants of Con-tinental nations. A paper in Elbing, where "four American milliardaires" lately inspected the Kaiser's stud, says the servants at the hotel where the Americans stopped were painfully disappointed at the small amount of tips they received. The hotel porter who took the luggage from the depot was rewarded with luggage from the depot was rewarded with 20 cents. The editor of the paper calculates that after deducting the cost of the ticker to enable him to enter the platform this
